

About The Doctor

Rafif Mousa, MD, MSc, is a Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility specialist who practices with a philosophy of providing the highest quality treatment of couples with fertility problems in a professional and caring environment. She builds very good relations with her patients, paying attention to small details that gives them a feeling of comfort, assurance and trust.

Dr. Rafif Mousa graduated from Eastern Virginia Medical School EVMS (Jones Institute), the birthplace of "baby-tube" in the US,) where she completed her clinical fellowship with focus on management for high complex infertility cases. She has a track of high success rate in pregnancy and has extensive experience in complex endoscopic and robotic surgery.

In parallel, Dr. Mousa went academics and earned a Master Degree in “Clinical Embryology and Andrology” at EVMS. Her studies are presented regularly in American infertility societies and many international meetings in Europe and Canada

Dr. Mousa used to be a well-known international figure who worked in the fertility fields for long years. She used to lecture in Middle East area.

Dr. Mousa has long history in research in subjects related to reproductive medicine. Her main field of interest is Male factor, uterine fibroids and poor ovarian response.

Dr. Mousa is consultant in reproductive medicine in the Gulf Area, where she is frequently invited to manage complicated infertility cases. She used to help to introduce many new techniques.

She is documented as the first case of Embryo biopsy and PGD in RFC. She was involved in many infertility societies executive boards in the past. She is a previous professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology in ‘Albaath University’. Dr. Mousa is now the medical director of American Fertility Medical Center (AFMC), Irvine CA.